The field of realism in the exhibition world is to lose its most famous protector—a pioneer and participant in that most tragic and picturesque period when Indian warfare revealed on the frontier, and a pioneer of animated pictures in its most dramatic—Colonel W. F. Cody ("Buffalo Bill"), who will end his show days in Richmond on Wednesday, November 1.

Colonel Cody holds the record as the world's leading exhibitor and educator along ethnological lines. In all parts of this country and in all the principal centers of population in Europe he has given exhibitions which have received the special plaudits of masses, the leading men and royalty of every nation favored with the presence of the "Wild West." Now the "Far East" has been added to the great collection of strenuous people of many lands, and the exhibition proves the leading one of the amusement world.

To mark his farewell Colonel Cody and Major Gordon W. Little have united their forces for the purpose of giving the people of America an anthropological exhibit covering the globe. Both of their exhibitions have made a wonderful record, and now that they are combined in the same arena, an amusement enterprise of rare interest will be found in the present attraction.

One hundred Indians from the West, representative groups of different races from the "Far East," cowboys and ranch girls, jugglers from Hindoostan, two groups of trained elephants which play on musical instruments, and feats of skilled wild bucking bronchos, camel caravans, Persian warriors, Asiatic acrobats, Cossacks, Japanese zouaves, the great Texas horse, "Joe Bailey," leading Rhoda Royall's and Ray Thompson's combined studs; twenty-eight Hante Ecote graduates, the United States cavalry and artillery, Buffalo Bill shooting from horseback and Johnny Baker at the traps. All these and more will be seen.

Messrs. Cody and Little have found that they have struck the keynote in amusement enterprises. Their success is deserved from the fact of always adding novelties to an already world-wide indorsed program of realistic features.

There will be no street parade every evening of men and horses being devoted to giving perfect performances. Colonel Cody has given none of these public processions for over ten years, their fatiguing effect on men and horses being such as to affect the snap, ginger and "go" necessary to a natural exhibition.

There will be two representations, 2 P. M. and 8 P. M., rain or shine.

The performances are given in the open, while the spectators are comfortably seated under shed-canvases, sheltered from sun or shower, arranged to secure fresh air—a seasonal summer entertainment. No more appropriate celebration of the day could be observed for old and especially the young, than to see the American history reproduced; the Rough Riders and the high school equestrians of the world; the primitive people from around the globe—all in action with periodic pyrotechnics and patriotism to the limit, with a reason and purpose, making a fitting festival to celebrate the final salute to his patron, of a man whose record, deeds and personality have retained the public attention for nearly half a century, and whose fame will extend into the future, when contemporary statesmen and potentates may be forgotten—the last of the American scouts, Buffalo Bill.

The company will arrive Wednesday, November 1, at daylight, and go into camp on the regular exhibition grounds on Cary Street.

Tuesday's Great Showing, as Usual, of Pattern Hats and Fur Shapes

Our buyer while in New York bought a gorgeous "Sample" line of Trimmings. These consist of rare fancy Ostrich and Bands of the dainty "New Middyie," to which the aigrette has given way; of those exquisite Flowers which only the French know how to color, and of Fur.

These trimmings have just arrived, and we haven't taken advantage of them to give our Millinery a tremendous selling Tuesday. We have placed them on shapes which are just now in the height of their popularity; on rich imported velours; on effective hand-made velvet shapes and long nap, silky beavers.
